The Comfort of Strangers. It is his second novel, and is set in an unnamed city (though the detailed description strongly suggests Venice). Harold Pinter adapted it as a screenplay for television in 1990 (The Comfort of Strangers), which starred Rupert Everett, Christopher Walken, Helen Mirren and Natasha Richardson. The film is set in Venice.

The Company of Strangers book by Robert Wilson

Award-winning British author Robert Wilson's The Company Of Strangers is a powerful, epic thriller which combines espionage, history and political intrigue. The novel also tells the poignant personal stories of a man and a woman, both spies - ostensibly for opposite sides, whose lives become forever intertwined after their meeting in WWII Lisbon.

The Company of Strangers by Robert Wilson

Robert Wilson's "The Company of Strangers" is, for me, a difficult book to review. Why? First, it's really 3 books: The author himself divides the story into 3 books. Book 1 is 286 pages long and takes place in the 1940's in Germany, Portugal and England. Book 2 encompasses the next 158 pages and takes place from 1968-71 in England and East Germany.
