The Willys engine serial numbers do NOT match the jeep's data plate serial numbers, nor the frame serial numbers, even if it is the original factory installed engine that is still in the vehicle. This is because Willys engines were taken out of the production line as needed and put into portable power generators, searchlight units, and welders.

note: I have read several publications stating that Willys used zinc coated steel or aluminium for their plates. I have studied the materials used by Willys and I am 100% sure that the metal used for the respective styles (seen here on this page) between mid 1942 until the end of production is solid zinc. From start of production until mid 1942 and the Canadian style dataplates they used br ass.

Data plates - Classic Jeep Parts

Willys used 7 different dash VIN data plates on CJ2As. At least 5 of the changes occurred during the '46 model run. Since data plates are not a "maintenance" item, the serial numbers at which the changes occurred are not documented in parts lists. I'm collecting what data I can to determine when the changes were made. If you can help out,
